

State of South Carolina

Governor's Proclamation

WHEREAS, each year, Americans remember the debt of gratitude we owe to our veterans who have given their lives in defense of freedom and democracy, with communities across South Carolina and the nation pausing to honor the great sacrifices made by our men and women in uniform; and

WHEREAS, in times of war and conflict, the members of the United States military have fought and died to defeat tyranny and protect our way of life, performing their duties with dedication, courage, and distinction; and

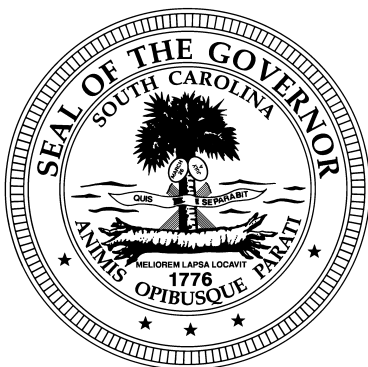

WHEREAS, the duty of preserving peace has claimed the lives of many South Carolinians who served our country valiantly and with little thought to their own personal safety; and

WHEREAS, while we mourn the loss of all our fallen military men and women, we must also celebrate their heroic lives and the better world they helped to shape.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Mark Sanford, Governor of the Great State of South Carolina, do hereby proclaim May 29, 2006, as throughout the state and encourage all South Carolinians to pause on this special day of remembrance to recognize and honor those Americans whose sacrifices have made our nation strong and our world a better place.
